Given that the General Council in its session of 21 June 2012 has approved the following:
Law 10/2012, of 21 June, on foreign investment in the Principality of Andorra

Explanatory memorandum

Private foreign investment has become a strategic policy tool to promote economic growth driven by states, which seek to attract these resources to attract entrepreneurship, talent, innovation and knowledge.

According to the OECD, beyond the stimulus derived from the investment itself, foreign investment, and especially foreign direct investment, influences growth and increases productivity and efficiency in the use of the recipient country's resources. Thus, one of the main effects of foreign investment is the diversification of the economy, with the creation of new economic sectors, and the increase in the competitiveness of existing sectors. Other effects produced by foreign investment are the dissemination of good practices in business management, technology transfer, the implementation of training programmes and the increase in tax revenues of the recipient countries. So much so that one of the most used incentives by governments has been to open their respective markets to foreign investors by modifying regulatory rules, with the aim of reducing the protectionism that many states traditionally granted to certain national economic sectors.

The Principality of Andorra has not been oblivious to this trend either, as evidenced by Law 2/2008, of 8 April, on foreign investment, which led to the opening of 100 per cent of some activities to foreign capital. However, four years after the path started by that reform that aimed to attract companies whose activities were not essentially present in Andorra, it has been found that the measures promoted have not been sufficient to achieve the objectives that had been planned. And in a context of crisis in which most of the Principality's economic indicators are still showing a downward trend, the need to carry out structural reforms and, in particular, to modify the current legislative framework on foreign investment, is confirmed, with the aim of seeking a wider space for progress and competitiveness.

Thus, the liberalisation of foreign investment, together with the signing of double taxation agreements, following the recent application of direct taxation on companies and economic activities, should position the Andorran economy in a position to compete on equal terms with neighbouring economies, and at the same time should make Andorra an attractive destination for new sectors and companies. In short, economic openness is the path that can provide the greatest guarantees of success to ensure a new phase of growth and prosperity in the Andorran economy and society.

However, this liberalization of investments is not done without taking into account a series of safeguards to preserve the interests that the State considers strategic. Thus, the Law expressly reserves certain matters that should be protected, both to prevent investments from countries considered non-cooperative in the field of money laundering, and by making it possible for the Government to deny, in a reasoned manner, the authorisation of investments whose conditions of implementation may prejudice the exercise of public power, sovereignty and national security, public order, the environment or public health.

The main objectives of economic openness are to attract investments and companies that can contribute significantly to economic development, offering greater diversification of the economy and providing high added value. At the same time, it aims to avoid adverse effects on free competition, the labor market, and the financial balance of public resources. Consequently, a series of objective factors are established to evaluate the investment, such as the employment and training model, the value of the investment, the expansion plan, or the level of commitment to the Principality, among others. On the other hand, the liberalisation of foreign investment in all sectors of the economy is also accompanied by an important reform with regard to obtaining the economic rights of individuals. Thus, it is established that the economic rights of individuals are acquired by obtaining their legal residence in the Principality. In particular, the current legislation on the exercise of the liberal professions is amended by abolishing the requirement of twenty years of residence for non-nationals to be able to carry out professional activity in Andorra. However, the exercise of the activity of liberal professionals is conditional on their effective and permanent residence, as well as on the criterion of reciprocity, which allows the effective exercise of the liberal profession to Andorran nationals in the state of origin of those who apply to exercise a liberal profession in Andorra.

With regard to investments in real estate, the current limitations established on two flats or apartments per foreign individual have been eliminated, and the necessary link to business activity for investments in real estate made by Andorran companies with a majority of foreign capital has also been abolished. With regard to the authorisation procedure, the prior authorisation procedure is maintained for all direct investments that exceed 10 per cent of participation in companies, and also for investments in real estate. In this way, the guarantees that the new foreign investment regime is adapted to the established objectives are increased. And to speed up the procedure as much as possible, the deadline for resolving the foreign investment application is reduced to one month, extendable for a period of fifteen days, and acceptance is established in the event of silence from the Administration.

With regard to the structure of the Law, it essentially follows that of Law 2/2008, although the modifications introduced have made it necessary to draft a new legislative text that repeals Law 2/2008. Thus, this Law is structured in eight chapters, twenty-two articles, four additional provisions, one transitional, one repealing and three final provisions.

The first chapter contains general provisions that establish the definitions and legal nature of foreign investments, the safeguard clauses, the types and forms of foreign investment, following the categories traditionally used in the European Union in order to increase legal certainty, and also regulate payments and collections derived from foreign investments to fulfil a control function.

Chapters two to five establish the regime for each of the four forms of foreign investment: direct investments, portfolio investments, real estate investments, and other forms. The meaning of each is defined, the scope is delimited, total liberalization for each is foreseen, and it specifies which require prior authorization, such as direct investments exceeding 10% ownership, real estate investments, and other forms of investment. For portfolio investments, liberalization is maintained in general without requiring an authorization process.

Chapters six and seven contain the rules relating to competences and procedures, as well as the formalization and registration of foreign investments. To this end, an eighth chapter is introduced, which regulates the Foreign Investment Registry as the administrative body responsible for the registration functions of foreign investments.

The additional provisions amend Law 6/2008, of 15 May, on the exercise of liberal professions and professional colleges and associations; Law 20/2007, of 18 October, on Public Limited Companies and Limited Liability Companies, amended by Law 4/2008, of 15 May, and the Law on Real Estate Property Transfers, of 15 December 2000.

The transitional provision establishes a procedure to regulate the registration of foreign investments made prior to the entry into force of the Law.

Finally, the final provisions empower the Government to develop the Law in a regulatory manner, establish the economic rights of foreign individuals when they acquire residence in Andorra and establish the entry into force of the Law.

Foreign investments are also those destined for branches or other types of permanent establishments in Andorra of non-residents; and those made by other Andorran legal persons when at least 50 per cent of the voting rights of their decision-making body belong, directly or indirectly, to any of the natural or legal persons, described in letters a), b), c) and d) of this article.

f) Legal persons of Andorran nationality, who are financed directly or indirectly, by any of the persons, described in letters a), b), c) and d) of this article.

The acquisition of movable property or the acquisition or constitution of rights shall not be considered foreign investment or subject to this Law, unless this Law expressly defines them as foreign investment.

2. For the purposes of this Law, foreign holdings are understood to be held by natural persons who are not residents or who have less than 3 years of uninterrupted residence, counted from the date of obtaining the immigration permit or similar document.

3. In accordance with this Law, foreign states, foreign official public entities and institutions, and public companies and companies of foreign nationality are understood to be public entities of foreign sovereignty when the holder of the majority of their capital belongs to any of the aforementioned entities, or are subject to their effective control or are classified as public by the legislation of the country of origin.

4. Investments made by foreign individuals residing in Andorra with more than 3 years of residence acquire the status of foreign investments when the aforementioned persons cease to reside in Andorra.

5. Foreign investments made by individuals who are not resident in Andorra lose this status when these persons acquire residence in the Principality of Andorra, and maintain residence in the Principality of Andorra for more than 3 years in the case of investments in real estate. Under no circumstances will this circumstance entail the refund of the tax that was generated and settled, at the time, on the merits of the Law on Foreign Investment Tax in the Principality of Andorra.

6. Foreign investments are those made by Andorran legal persons when they change their nationality, or when the foreign participation in them or the period of residence places them in one of the cases established in sections d), e) or f) of section 1.

7. Investments made by foreign legal persons lose the status of foreign investments when they become governed by Andorran law, or when they cease to be in the cases established in sections d), e) or f) of section 1, either in relation to the percentage or the period of residence. Under no circumstances will this circumstance entail the refund of the tax that was generated and settled, at the time, on the merits of the Law on Foreign Investment Tax in the Principality of Andorra.

The classification as a foreign investment entails the obligation to declare it to the Foreign Investment Register and the settlement of the corresponding tax on the merits of the Law on Foreign Investment Tax in Real Estate in the Principality of Andorra.

Article 2. Safeguard clause

1. Foreign investments made by individuals residing, domiciled, or, in the case of legal entities, nationals of any country considered non-cooperative in matters of money laundering and terrorist financing, as defined by the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) or the competent international body in this matter, are not authorized. Likewise, investments made by individuals or legal entities for whom the bodies responsible for the prevention of money laundering and terrorist financing issue an unfavorable report are also not permitted.

2. The competent ministry in matters of foreign investment can only deny authorization for foreign investment, always with justification, when the investment could harm, even occasionally, the exercise of public authority, national sovereignty and security, public order and economy, the environment, public health, or the general interest of the Principality. This also applies to any direct foreign investment related to sensitive goods, as defined by the Law on the Control of Sensitive Goods, dated March 4, 1999.

To assess compliance with the provisions established in the previous paragraph, the Government must regulate the objective elements and factors that, when applicable, the competent ministry in matters of foreign investment must verify. These elements and factors should allow the evaluation of whether the foreign investment might have an adverse effect on free competition, the labor market, and the balance of public resources.

3. To carry out the economic activities related to a foreign investment, the holder must observe and comply with the laws and regulations that govern the specific sector or sectors where the activities take place.
